The publication of the Standard Twentieth Century Dictionary: Urdu-English, compiled by Mr. Bashir Ahmad Qureshi will be welcomed by Urdu speakers and students in India. This dictionary is different from other dictionaries in the sense that it contains modern English renderings of over 50,000 phrases and words used in the present-day literary Urdu. This is perhaps the first dictionary which has appeared with illustrations. It is hoped that with the ensuing editions these will be further improved.

The art of lexicography as it is practised in some of the developed languages of the western and eastern hemisphere is a challenging one, and some excellent models have been produced in English, French, Russian, German, Japanese and other languages. The Urdu lexicography has to take many strides to catch up with the standards set by scholars of these languages. It should be recalled that the European orientalists like John Gilchrist, John Shakespeare, Duncan Forbes, S.W. Fallon and John Platts did some excellent work in the field of Urdu-English lexicography. Of these Forbes' and Fallon's work laid a sound foundation for John Platts' excellent comprehensive Dictionary of Urdu, Classical Hindi and English. A lot of lexical work went in the preparation of this dictionary, and so much care was taken to explore the Sanskritic, Prakritic, Arabo-Persian and Turkish sources of Urdu and Hindustani words, that later this monumental work became a rich source-material for scholars working on the etymological sources of the lexical terms. The next landmark was achieved by Baba-e-Urdu, Maulvi Abdul Haq, who inspired some of the leading scholars of the day like the late Dr. Abdus Sattar Siddiqui and the late Dr. Abid Husain to assist him in the preparation of the Standard English – Urdu Dictionary for which the Concise Oxford English-English Dictionary served as the model. This work, though it needs revision and updating, is still in vogue.

The present Standard Twentieth Century Dictionary gives the semantic equivalents extensively. It lists substantives and verbals separately and also discusses proverbs and idioms. The calligraphy is in nastaliq to ensure its extensive use. Though the phonological table does not follow the phonetic detail exhaustively, still it is fairly representative. There has been a shift in the pronunciation of words where 'h' is preceded or followed by a short vowel like

بِہر مَہر مُہر ، احترام احتشام ، زحمت رحمت ، سہرا چہرہ ، یہ وہ ، بہنا سہنا

The pronunciation obviously involves lowering and fronting of short vowels like zer, zabar and pesh when preceding or following the 'h' sound. The compiler has done his best to indicate the current pronunciation of the Urdu words with the help of an elaborate system of transliteration.

The efforts of Mr. M.M. Khan, (Mr. India), proprietor, Educational Publishing House, Delhi. who is bringing out this Dictionary for the benefit of Urdu students and readers in this country. are commendable. I hope the Dictionary will serve the purpose for which it is being brought out.

FOREWORD

BY

Dr. S.M. Abdullah, M.A.,D. Litt.

General Secretary, West Pakistan Urdu Academy; Chairman, Department of Urdu Encyclopaedia, University of the Punjab; Formerly Principal and Head of the Deparment of Urdu, University Oriental College, Lahore.

The present Standard Urdu-English Dictionary compiled by Prof. Bashir Ahmad Qureshi is decidedly an advance on the previous lexicographical works of this nature. The author has already won fame and distinction by producing an equally valuable English-Urdu Dictionary which is perhaps; the best practical reference book in its own field.

In the present dictionary, the author has taken great pains to indicate accent. He has also endeavoured to guide the reader in exact pronunciation. For instance, we find highly accurate transliteration of some extremely difficult phonetic complexities, rendered intelligible to an ordinary reader—especially thc foreign reader—by means of a well-thought-out system. Some such words as احترام and احتراز are often difficult to be pronounced correctly by a foreign learner because in the original language (i.e., Arabic), the first alif is مکسور whereas in Urdu, in spite of its being مکسور it is pronounced somewhat differently, with the result that in the interest of accuracy the author had to transliterate these, as eh tiram and ehtiraz, instead of ihtiram and ihtiraz which do not correspond with the spoken form.

Similarly, we have the Persian word شہر which is neither شَہر nor شِہر but midway between the two forms—and it was extremely difficult for the compiler to reproduce it in its pure accuracy except as shaih'r. This secms to be correct because, the common transliteration shehr too is not in correspondence with the spoken form.

These instances would amply indicate the intricacies of the problems facing the author of this dictionary.

Prof. Bashir Ahmad Qureshi has incorporated quite a large number of new words drawn form English and other foreign languages. These words now form a part of the Urdu language and deserve a place in such a compilation. The number of such words is larger in this dictionary than in any other compilation of the same nature.

In my opinion, the present work is a great achievement and will be found extremely helpful in spreading the Urdu language in the English-speaking countries. It would also be of great help to all those, in Pakistan as well as abroad, who are called upon to undertake the work of translation from Urdu into English.

PREFACE

The cultural - cum - national language of the Islamic State of Pakistan has long deserved a much less shabby lexicographic treatment than a mere-reprint of Platts' outdated dictionary (issued recently) or a plethora of publications based on it. This is the raison d'etre of Kitabistan's 20th-Century Standard Urdu-English Dictionary now being offered to the public.

This is a dictionary with a difference in that it makes a truly linguistic approach to Urdu lexicography. It comprises well over half a lakh words, phrases and proverbs one most frequently comes across in one's contact with people or literature today. These are explained in various nuances and their modern English renderings are set out in all accuracy. All this makes the present compilation profitable for the common reader, illuminating for the foreign learner and indispensable for the student who is called upon to translate passages into English as an essential part of the examinatons.

The transliteration system adopted for indicating the pronunciation of Urdu words in this dictionary is based on principles which are by and larg accepted by modern Orientalists. It has the added advantage of being akin to the Roman Urdu script used for army education in this sub-continent over the past few generations.

A special feature of this work is the indication of accent in the pronunciation of Urdu words. This is not just an innovation. The attempt was first made by Dr. Fallon and his talented team, in New Hindustani-English Dictionary but has been overlooked by compilers ever since, resulting in ludicrous phonetic errors by foreign speakers of the language. The present work which owes a lot to that epoch-making lexicon as well as to Farhang-i-Asafiyyah and Nur-ul-Lughat, revives the unique feature in addition to presenting many new ones.

Preference in vocabulary, idiom and pronunciation in this compilation is given mainly to the Western dialect of Urdu which is cognate with the various regional languages of the sub-continent.

A word about etymological notes on various entries in this dictionary. For headwords of Arabic origin, the Urdu form closest to the Arabic root is given as being more serviceable and revealing to the ordinary student of Urdu than the Arabic root itself. English derivatives are not traced further beyond, save when of special interest. Other languages of origin are indicated at relevant places. Where, however, the derivation is not given, the word must be considered to be purely Urdu in origin.

The unprecedented reception accorded to this compilation has now encouraged the publisher to bring out this edition on photo blocks with the Urdu entries in nasta'liq script rather than naskh type. That should serve to make it still more presentable.
